Famine Is Stayed, but San Francisco's Need Is Vast.

The First Peril of the Situation Has Been Met, but the Problem Is a Gigantic One

The fear that famine would descend upon the homeless people of San Francisco has been removed and the nation is conscious of a great relief. That horror added to the others would have driven hundreds mad and slain more.

The food trains and ships rushed in by the Government, the Hearst newspapers and other agencies have met and conquered the perilous situation. The multitudes camped in the open air and stripped of all their belongings at least have enough to eat for the next few days.

But though the immediate wants of the houseless and impoverished population have been supplied, the problem confronting the military and civil authorities is a gigantic one. Order has to be evolved from chaos and a new organization created to take the place of that destroyed.

For some weeks the great majority of the people will have to be fed, and many for longer than that—until employment brings wages again to the vast army of workers who have been made idle and penniless.

Many millions of money will be required to carry three hundred thousand people over the interval of helplessness. Every town in California within easy reach of the burned metropolis is now packed with refugees, and the resources of these towns have been strained in providing for them. The task of doing so is too heavy for local strength. It is the duty of the whole country to shoulder the burden.

The need for giving has not passed with the first excitement and fervor of sympathy awakened by the catastrophe. That need is as real now as it was when the flames were still devouring the city and will continue to be imperative until the shattered community can bring its energies to bear for its own support.

The period of helplessness will be so brief as to astonish mankind and command its admiration. No people in the world are more self-reliant, courageous and vigorous than the Californians. They are already the first to treat with scorn the timid notion that San Francisco's shaken site should be abandoned.

They point to the fact that steel buildings were little harmed, or not at all, by the earthquake—that it was to fire the city owed its destruction. They recognize the existence of the earthquake risk, of course, precisely as the sailor recognizes the risk of shipwreck, but they are as little ready to desert the San Franciscan peninsula on that account as men are to give up ocean commerce.

The men who make a city, the men of brains and enterprise, and public spirit, are thinking at this moment, while the ruins are still smoking, not about quitting, but about how to take advantage of the opportunity to make San Francisco more beautiful, more modern, and in all ways better adapted to the magnificent future which awaits her as the New York of the Pacific—a future that has not been affected by this disaster, colossal as it is.

What is at this hour but a waste of blackened desolation, within a few short weeks will be a city of tents and temporary structures resembling the town of pioneer days, feverish with the life of business. And steadily will rise the permanent buildings of steel, fireproof and as nearly earthquake-proof as anything of human make can be, that are destined to be the rule in new San Francisco.

And so tremendous will be the expenditure for materials and wages in the work of rehabilitation that San Francisco, now prostrate and dependent upon the rest of the country for food, will speedily be in the enjoyment of a boom surpassing anything it has ever known.

Her calamity, like those of Chicago, Boston, Galveston and Baltimore, will leave no lasting wounds.

But meantime San Francisco's people are without homes, without means, and must be fed and sheltered. The stream of giving that has flowed so liberally must flow on.

Give. Give freely. And give quickly.

Andrew Mack, the noted actor and singer, will afford you a chance to help the victims to-morrow. He will turn newsboy for the occasion. He will dispose of BOSTON AMERICANS at various points in the city. He will also sing.

Look out for him and buy a paper. Don't be afraid to pay a good price for the paper. Every cent of it will go to the California sufferers. Here is the singer-newsboy's program:

Leaves Boston Theatre at 11:40 A. M., at Stock Exchange at 11:55 A. M., at Scollay square at 12:15 P. M., at Park Street Church at 12:30 P. M. On Common, opposite Touraine, at 12:45 P. M. At South Station entrance at 5:10 P. M.

If by any chance you fail to buy a paper from Mr. Mack to-morrow, or even if you do, don't forget the newsboys on Friday. All of the members of the Newsboys' Union have agreed to contribute 10 per cent. of their earnings on Friday to the earthquake homeless thousands.

What do you think of these boys' exhibition of charity? Pretty good, isn't it? Well, men and women, see that you show them that you appreciate their sacrifices in the sweet name of charity. Buy papers and never mind about any change.

The lovers of sports will have their chance on Saturday night at the Hub Theatre. There will be a great benefit given in this theatre and all of the receipts will be sent to San Francisco.

The program will be one of the best ever devised in the city. Boxing, wrestling, vaudeville, all that is interesting and good of that character.

Buy tickets now. Go or send substitutes. It will help the helpless of the Pacific slope.

The American: First at San Francisco

Yesterday the BOSTON AMERICAN printed the first photographs of the desolated city of San Francisco. They give such an idea of the ruin wrought in that proud city as no written description could possibly effect. They are true to life, because photographic, and they are the first accurate pictures yet shown to the people of Boston.

The AMERICAN was first in accomplishing this, but, after all, that is nothing novel. The AMERICAN and the other Hearst newspapers are accustomed to get the news first and most completely.

The AMERICAN'S readers may rely upon having the news at whatever cost. No expense will be spared to give them the earliest and fullest reports of current events, wherever they may happen.

Woman and War

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner.

We women teach our little sons how wrong
And how ignoble blows are; school and church
Support our precepts, and inoculate
The growing mind with thoughts of love and peace,
"Let dogs delight to bark and bite," we say;
But human beings, with immortal souls,
Must rise above the methods of a brute,
And walk with reason and with self-control.

And then—dear God! you men, you wise, strong men,
Our self-announced superiors in brain,
Our peers in judgment, you go forth to war!
You leap at one another, mutilate
And starve and kill your fellow-men, and ask
The world's applause for such heroic deeds.
You boast and strut; and if no song is sung,
No laudatory epic writ in blood,
Telling how many widows you have made,
Why then, perforce, you say our bards are dead,
And inspiration sleeps to wake no more.

And we, the women, we, whose lives you are—
What can we do but sit in silent homes,
And wait and suffer? Not for us the blare
Of trumpets and the bugle's call to arms—
For us no waving banners, no supreme
Triumphant hour of conquest. Ours the slow,
Dread torture of uncertainty, each day
The bootless battle with the same despair.
And when at best your victories reach our ears,
There reaches with them, to our pitying hearts,
The thought of countless homes made desolate,
And other women weeping for their dead.

O men, wise men, superior beings, say,
Is there no substitute for war in this Great age and era! If you answer "No."
Then let us rear our children to be wolves,
And teach them from the cradle how to kill,
Why should we women waste our time and words
In talking peace, when men declare for war?

Man Will Conquer The Earthquake

By Frederick E. Breithut

SAN FRANCISCO gives its lesson—not that we human beings are small, petty, powerless; not that consciousness of ignorance is going to cause us to wail in helpless impotence and rage. Not these.

But ——

That man is great; that he must be independent, strong and aggressive; that it is only by his own fighting he can conquer.

We are greater than volcanoes and earthquakes, and we will conquer them yet. It may take a hundred years; it may take a thousand. But we will conquer or we will be blown to bits fighting, not lamenting that we are weak and the forces of Nature strong.

If we cannot down these outbreaks, at least we will be able to predict and avoid them. Science will do this, for it has done more. We have fought greater enemies and beaten them.

The plagues have claimed their myriad victims. Millions have fallen a prey to the ravages of scourging fevers. Innumerable martyrs have been sacrificed on the altar of bigotry. These destroyers have lost their terrors for us. Science has laid them low.

If men are killed science has but one cry—"Close in the ranks and march on! Do not sit aside crying for help! We must help ourselves!"

The catastrophe at San Francisco should call forth strength, virility, hope and faith in man's powerfulness and future development. Here is a battle worthier than of gods, worthy of men.

This is Science's word on San Francisco.

GHOULS LOOT RUINS

Withdrawal of Soldiers from Many Sections Is Followed by Wild Rush of Men and Women in Frantic Search for Treasure in Debris of Wrecked Buildings.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 26.—Withdrawal of troops from burned districts in the many sections of the city has been followed by a raid of looters upon the ruins.

Men and women by hundreds at once began work in the hot ashes in search of loot. Some searchers met with great success. Several pieces of valuable china were found intact. Costly bronzes and other metal work were recovered. One woman found a piece of gold worth several hundred dollars.

General Greeley has renewed his demand for additional troops. In a dispatch to-day to the War Department at Washington he declares that the 2,500 adiditional regulars wired for everal days ago is an imperative necessity. General Greeley tells the War Department that the force on duty is exhausted, but the outbreaw of vandalism is regarded here as the cause of his new request to-day.

General Greeley says:

"Not only is the present force inadequate to fully guard the interests of the city, but they have been necessarily overlooked in the part and are overtaxed to-day.

My request for 2,500 additional troops was made after the most careful consideration, and is a minimum number of troops outside this division considered absolutely essential to comply with reasonable requirements of civil authorities of State and city."

Commercial banks are preparing to resume business in a preliminary way. Before they open their vaults it has been arranged to pay depositors not exceeding $500 on account.

For the first time since the earthquake electric lights will be turned on to-night.

300,000 HOMELESS, WIRES GEN. GREELY

WASHINGTON, April 26.—The following dispatch was received from General Greely, in command at San Francisco, yesterday afternoon:

"Fort Mason, Cal., April 25.

"The Military Secretary, Washington, D. C.:

"Three hundred thousand people are homeless and the entire business facilities of a city of half a million have been destroyed, except those on one street of minor importance; accommodations for most urgent financial and other indispensable business institutions are being obtained only with the greatest difficulty.

"The mayor and the police are so fully occupied operating without ordinary accommodations that even the ordinary current duties such as pertaining to the coroner's office and vital statistics are largely neglected for lack of force and office accommodations; under such conditions a registration bureau is impossible.

DOLLARS DELUGE ANDREW MACK

Popular Actor-Singer Sells BOSTON AMERICANS to Thousands for Relief Fund.

Andrew Mack, the romantic actor, elected an honorary member of the Newsboys' Union, to-day sold BOSTON AMERICANS for the benefit of the Hearst fund for the relief of the San Francisco sufferers.

Mr. Mack gave no change. None was asked. A $10 bill was received with the same hearty "Thank you" as was given a 10 cent piece.

Everybody bought papers from Andrew Mack. They had to. He wouldn't take refusal, and he never was refused on any part of the trip to-day that he made for the benefit of humanity.

In front of Young's Hotel a little Italian woman whose frightened parting of the lips showed two teeth gone, whose head was covered by no costly headgear, pushed her way forward timidly to place a $1 bill in the hands of Mr. Mack and receive the coveted paper. How the crowd who saw the act cheered. Frightened at what she had done, the woman pushed her way through the crowd, and still clinging to the paper hastened away to her humble home in the North End.

Gave $10 For a Paper.

It was at the same point that a red faced man, who would give no name, thrust forward a ten dollar bill. He got a cheer that was equal to that accorded the woman's dollar bill.

Seldom has anything about the streets attracted such a crowd as did the famous actor's sale of the BOSTON AMERICAN. His scheduled route was thronged. At times traffic was held up while he collected the coin. Nobody minded any trouble that was caused, for it was for somebody's good.

For this sale a special edition of the BOSTON AMERICAN was run off with a picture of the actor on the front page. The edition gave also the latest news from 'Frisco.

Mr. Mack started from the Boston Theatre about noon, accompanied by John Osborne of the theatre and representatives of the BOSTON AMERICAN in two White steamer automobiles. In one of the cars was a big sign announcing that the actor was selling the papers for the benefit of the San Francisco sufferers.

Big Stock Exchange Crowd.

The first stop was made on State street at the Stock Exchange building. Here a big crowd awaited the actor-newsboy. His newsboy union button was displayed conspicuously on the lapel of his coat. He announced himself quickly.

Brokers and bookkeepers, office boys and women clerks were ready with their money. Bills and coin dropped into the tin box. The money flew in the direction of the actor's auto. Not content with the cleaning out of the crowd, Mr. Mack went to the floor of the Exchange Building and pleaded for funds.

"Come, better give up; they need bread out there," he called.

"I'm working for widows and orphans, for the poor and the children," was another announcement.

"Don't be afraid to give. They raised $1,600 selling papers in the stock exchange in New York. Boston must not be behind."

Then the dollars dropped into Mr. Osborne's open cash box.

Almost Blocked Passage.

From State street the autos toured to Scollay square. Passage was rendered almost impossible by the crowd. Here it was that the clerks and the workingmen came forward, few with smaller than a quarter, to purchase a copy of the paper.

"Throw the money out of the window," the newsboy actor announced when he saw people looking from an office building.

Followed by a great crowd through Washington and School streets to Tremont street, where a stop was made in front of the Park street, the actor never failed an opportunity to stop and collect some money.

The crowd had taken possession of the Park Street Church steps and the larger half of the street. They waited there until the actor came up, and they had their dollars held out for papers. Copies of the BOSTON AMERICAN went like hot cakes.

Up in an office window a woman held forth a dollar. "Throw it down," called Mr. Mack. "Throw anything down. I dare you to hit me with $10 gold pieces; I dare you."

"Again he said: "This is to buy bread for the children."

In came a rush of dollars.

"Now I've got some money for the bread, let's contribute some for doughnuts."

Dollars Fell Thick.

More dollars.

"Now I guess the children want some seed cakes; buy my papers to give the children seed cakes."

Some more dollars with a sprinkling of smaller pieces. Johnny Osborne's hat grew heavy and he had to empty it. Quickly it was thrust forth for further collections.

Down the street came the parade of the "Ham Tree" and "Forty-Five Minutes from Broadway" companies, who engaged in baseball combat at the American League grounds to-day. Pretty girls on the drag seats called cheers for "Mack" and got them.

"Buy my papers," called Mack.

"Buy our tickets," was called back.

"Done," and a rapid exchange was made. There was little change left in the crowd when the benefit workers had got through with their sales.

The last stand was made on the Common near the corner of Boylston and Tremont streets. As everywhere else a big crowd had gathered. The Touraine was emptied as people went out to buy.

The first paper went to William Connelly of Brigham's Hotel. Seeing the parade of autos on their way to get papers, he held them up and proferred a two-dollar bill for the first copy. He got it by mail.

Mr. Mack's last sale of papers is at the South station at 5.10 to-night. There, in his auto, he catches the crowds on their way home.

5000 DENOUNCE SLAUGHTER OF RECOUNT BILL

Carnegie Hall Crowded by Citizens Who Protest Against Legislative Treachery.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Five thousand earnest, law-abiding citizens, as many as Carnegie Hall could hold, registered last night an earnest and indignant protest against the Legislature's slaughter of the mayoralty recount bill.

The meeting typified the second stage in the revolt of the people against corporation domination, of which the honest verdict at the polls last November was the first stage.

No more remarkable meeting has ever assembled in New York. At a time of absolute political quiet, with the appalling disaster at San Francisco uppermost in the public mind, a crowd of earnest, enthusiastic citizens crowded every corner of Carnegie Hall and voiced a mighty protest against the nullification of their most precious rights, as typified in the treachery of the Legislature's defeat of the bill providing for a recount of the ballots cast at the last mayoralty election.

Henry A. Powell of Brooklyn, who presided at the great gathering, earnestly described it as the most potent gathering that had assembled in the United tSates since that meeting in Philadelphia when the fathers sat down to fashion the fabric of our government.

Speeches were delivered by Clarence J. Shearn, John Ford, Rev. Charles R. East, Charles Sprague Smith, Calvin Tomkins and William Randolph Hearst, as well as by the presiding officer.

Mr. Hearst responded with a striking speech that kept the enthusiasm at the highest pitch as long as he was before the crowd.

His reference to McClellan as "the littlest Mayor New York has ever had" provoked a mighty burst of laughter. His designation of McClellan's supporters as the "Captain Kidds of finance," and his other flings at the political gang which is behind McClellan, kept the laughter rippling through the big audience.

His sarcastic hits at the Jeffersonian Democracy of McClellan caused cheer after cheer to sweep over the house, and when he concluded he was accorded another ovation, which lasted until the band drowned out the cheers.

NORTHFIELD, Vt., April 26.—The village has voted to have a water system of its own and work upon a reservoir will be begun at once.

RELIEF SECRETARY QUIT AFTER SCANDAL

M'SWEENEY, ASSISTING IN RELIEF FUND, HAS TO LEAVE IMMIGRATION BUREAU.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—Much surprise was expressed among Treasury Department officials here when it was learned that Edward F. McSweeney, former Assistant Immigration Commissioner at the port of New York, had been appointed secretary of the Massachusetts Relief Association, which is collecting funds for the earthquake victims.

It is believed here that the members of the State Committee who chose Mr. McSweeney cannot know his record as well as it is known in Washington and New York.

McSweeney retired from his position as Assistant Immigration Commissioner in 1902, his resignation being demanded by President McKinley after a long investigation of charges of fraud that had been made against his department.

The investigation of the charges was conducted by Richard K. Campbell, special Inspector, and John J. S. Rogers, commissioner of Immigration at Philadelphia, at the request of the President. The report filled 2,240 typewritten pages, and a great deal of it was suppressed because it involved Republican politicians.

The report recommended the dismissal of McSweeney and several of his subordinates. This is an extract from the report:

"Your committee finds that the most continuous and flagrant bribe-taking is practiced. Several of the officials have been identified by the victims from whom they extorted money."

In the report several cases were cited where immigrants were detained until money could be extorted from their friends. This was usually accomplished, the committee found, by Thomas Burke, who had the especial confidence of McSweeney.

PASS MIDNIGHT LIQUOR BILL TO ENACTMENT

VOTE IS 104 TO 99, AFTER BITTER DEBATE IN HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

The 12 o'clock liquor bill was passed to be enacted by the House of Representatives to-day by a vote of 104 to 99, and now goes to the Senate for enactment.

The bill came up for final action after as exciting a session as the House ever held. Bitter debate, in which the lie was given and recrimination freely indulged in, characterised the closing scenes of the enactment of this important piece of legislation.

Representative Robert Luce of Somerville, declaring that he had been misled, moved to strike out from the bill the enacting clause and that the bill be assigned for consideration next Monday.

Springing to his feet, House Chairman Ames of the Liquor Laws Committee said: "I do not generally care to indulge in any controversy, but I will say that the statement made by the gentleman from Somerville to the effect that I misled him or that I had any agreement with him is absolutely false and without foundation."

Mr. Luce's motion was lost.

The bill provides that in all cities in this Commonwealth of 45,000 population or more liquor may be sold in the public dining rooms of hotels until midnight.

Predicts Earthquake and Tidal Wave in Cuba in May.

HAVANA, April 26.—Professor J. F. Nowack of Vienna, who is lecturing before the Cuban Institute of Sciences on phenomena of nature, predicts a violent earthquake or tidal wave between May 15 and 19, which will sweep the seaward part of Havana, including the suburb of Vedado.

Professor Nowack bases his prediction on his studies of the condition of plant life in the vicinity of Havana, and on peculiarities in the appearance of the sun.

NEW FRISCO EARTHQUAKE KILLS WOMAN

TERROR AGAIN SEIZES CITY, PANIC IN CAMPS

Chimney Crashes Into Kitchen and Slays Housewife at Her Work.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 26.—Sixty thousand people have joined in the flight from stricken Frisco.

Ever since the great shock of a week ago Wednesday, seismic tremors have shaken the city almost hourly, culminating yesterday afternoon in a shock that brought the walls of ruined buildings crashing and tumbling to the ground, killed one woman and created new panic and consternation among the terror-stricken inhabitants.

The shocks continued to-day, some of them being felt severely, especially in the centre of the city.

The shock of last night, while not severe as compared with the two great earth wrenchers that preceded the fire, was of sufficient severity to convert the city and the camps on its outskirts into rushing, shouting centres of fright for a half-hour or so.

Workmen, who were toiling in the strenuous race that has begun at resurrecting the city from its ashes and debris leaped and clambered from swaying scaffolds and ran from the dangerous proximity of insecure walls.

When the fright was over the authorities realized that the shock had been of direct benefit. By displacing walls and houses that would of necessity have had to be removed, the labor of many thousands of men for days was saved.

In the face of the trembling of the earth, and the uncertainty as to whether or not another grave convulsion will come, confidence is being regained in a marked degree by the citizens.

CHARGE GRAFTERS AT WORK ROBBING FRISCO SUFFERERS

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, April 26.—The Evening World prints the following dispatch from San Francisco:

"On the heels of President Roosevelt's proclamation asking that contributions to the homeless and suffering here be sent to James D. Phelan, former Mayor of San Francisco, and now chairman of the Finance Committee of Relief, and not to the Red Cross Society, the charge is made today that some persons or some body of men are making graft out of the relief trains and money contributions.

"It is alleged to-day that there has been wholesale grabbing of food, clothing and money. As the contributions continue to come in from all parts of the United States more opportunity will be given to these thieves, and to-day a new order of things will come into the arrangement of affairs.

From 15 to 20 Trains a Day.

"Notice has been received that for the next ten days, at least, relief will arrive here on from fifteen to twenty trains a day. With such a mass of supplies in the hands of dishonest men, who pose as charity workers for selfish motives, the chance of steal will be alarming.

"Now the United States soldiers have stepped forward. They will not share their guard work with the State militia or the citizens' patrol, who have been accused of shooting down innocent men and at least one woman, just because they wanted to show their authority. The United States soldiers will do this work.

"The thief and professional mendicant have appeared on every hand. They have actually taken food and clothing they did not need from men, women and children who have been in dire want.

Precautions Against Fraud.

"Beginning to-day kitchens and mess rooms will be established where no hungry man or woman will be turned away. There is plenty for all who apply, but no food can be carried away.

"In the distribution of clothing precautions against fraud will be taken by squads detailed to visit each tent or shelter, list the occupants and tabulate their wants. Orders will be given out entitling the holders to the needed clothing, bedding or other stores.

"'The perplexing problem that we may have to contend with is the prevention of unequal distribution of food,' said Chief of Police Dinan. 'Those of the worst element in the city, we find, are living better than they ever did in their lives, while the unfortunates who have never been accustomed to ask for aid are actually suffering.

"'We are doing all in our power to relieve this condition and hope in a few days to get rid of those who are taking everything in sight.'"

15 MORE VICTIMS OF FRISCO'S HORROR ARE IDENTIFIED

VIOLET HOLLS AS HURDY GURDY GIRL

Violet Holls is going to Harvard.

The pretty, vivacious actress of "The Earl and the Girl" company is not going to be an undergraduate. No.

But she is to play a hand-organ in Italian peasant costume in Harvard square to-morrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock to collect Harvard coin for the benefit of the Hearst Relief Fund.

Imagine the treat coming to the gay collegians. Also imagine the amount of money the demure Violet will coax from their generous pockets.

Those who have seen Miss Holls on the stage can easily see how attractive she will look in Italian costume, playing a hand-organ. It will be a mistake if she doesn't "maka da mon an' getta da cash."

Announcement was made in the Harvard College papers to-day that Miss Holls was to play in the square and the students are anticipating her arrival with all the zest with which collegians welcome the advent of a pretty girl.

After Miss Holls has gathered in all the spare Harvard coin she will go with her hand organ to the Park street subway entrance at 5 o'clock and play to the rush of subway strap-hangers on their way home from work. It is expected that she will reap a second harvest of money from this location.

If you are near the subway entrance about 5 o'clock to-morrow afternoon, watch for Violet, the hand organ lady, and "giva da mon."

Melville Woodbury Sawyer of the Hotel Westminster and Mrs. Alma Helen (Roberts) Hopkins of No. 1,855 Beacon street, Brookline, were married at noon to-day at Trinity Church, by the Rev. Alexander Mann, pastor of the church. The wedding was a pretty social affair and was attended by the friends of both parties.

Following the ceremony the whole party made merry at a breakfast served at the Westminster. Mr. and Mrs. Sawyer announced that they will be at home in September, at which time they will occupy apartments at the Westminster.

Mr. Sawyer is the son of Mrs. Melville Sawyer of this city. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. M. W. Roberts of Brookline.

R. F. Curtis of this city acted as best man at the wedding, and the maid of honor was Miss Katherine Squire, ten years old, a cousin of the bride. The ushers were: George W. Roberts, brother of the bride, John P. Squire, Dr. John W. Achorn, Emil Richter, Dr. E. A. Austin and Dr. H. H. Hartung. The bride was given away by her son, F. Laurence Hopkins.

MILLIONAIRE'S SON GETS JAIL SENTENCE

WORTHLEY AND JEROW, SOCIETY LEADERS, ADJUDGED GUILTY ON GAMING CHARGE.

Thirty days in the House of Correction was the sentence given Harry T. Worthley youngest son of the millionaire Lynn shoe manufacturer, Mark J. Worthley, in the Lynn Police Court to-day. A similar sentence was also passed on Frank Jerow, prominent in Lynn social circles.

The two young men were arrested in a raid on a Lynn gambling house a week ago, in company with ten others. Worthley and Jerow swore that no gambling was going on in the house. Their companions were fined $15 and costs each on gambling charges, and thirty days in the House of Correction was added for Worthley and Jerow because the court said the young had lied on the witness stand. They will appeal the case. Both men are out under bonds.

$12,000,000 SUITS TO DRIVE PACKERS OUT

Beef Trust Threatens to Withdraw Plants From Texas on Account of Prosecution.

CHICAGO, April 26.—The Chronicle today says: Prosecution of the suit against the Armour and Swift interests in Texas for the purpose of securing a $12,000,000 penalty for violation of anti-trust laws may result in the closing of all packing plants in Texas and the withdrawal of the Chicago packing concerns from that State.

This was the announcement made by officials of the Swift and Armour companies in discussing the effect of the suits brought against them by the attorney-general of Texas.

As a result of anti-trust investigation in Texas by Judge J. H. Lightfoot, assistant to the attorney-general, twenty-one suits have been filed in the twenty-sixth district court by the State, involving penalties of $12,000,000.

ONLY 2 DAYS MORE

$5 a Month for Medicine and Treatment Until Cured. Just One-Half the Regular Fee. To All Patients Who Begin or Renew Treatment On or Before April 28th Consultation and Careful Physical Examination, Including X-Ray Examination and Analysis of the Urine Free. Spring the Best Time to Cure Chronic Disease. Don't Wait. Why Pay More?

Five dollars a month for medicine and treatment until cured to all patients who begin or renew treatment on or before April 28th, 1906.

This is the remarkable offer made by the Osmo-Chemic physicians, the great scientists, who are making so many remarkable cures of stubborn, chronic ailments that have resisted the best efforts of the regular family physicians. Under this offer the high standard of skill, medicine and treatment will not be lowered, but remain the same as when the regular fee of ten dollars per month is charged, and that, as every intelligent person knows, is the best skill, medicine and treatment that money can buy. Why pay more? This offer is made in order that skilful, scientific medical service may be within the reach of all, even the slenderest purse. It is open to all, no matter what your disease, providing it be curable.

Spring is the best time to cure. Now Nature lends her kindly aid, and patients with liver and kidneys clogged and debilitated from the excessive work of the trying winter months need cleansing and purifying and renovating, just as your house does.

Free X-Ray Examination

We never accept a case for treatment until we have made a careful examination with our perfected X-Ray and other marvelous instruments that leaves no doubt as to the cause of the patient's affliction. This perfect method of diagnosis is at your service absolutely free, provided you call on or before April 28, 1906.

DON'T WAIT If you have any trouble and want to be cured, begin a course of treatment with the Osmo-Chemic Physicians, Room 10, No. 18 Boylston st., on or before April 28th, and you will receive consultation and examination with the perfected X-Ray and analysis of the urine absolutely free. Treatment and medicine at one-half the regular price, namely—$5.00 per month until cured—to all who begin or renew tratment on or before April 28th. Why pay more?

LET EVERYBODY KNOW

Mr. G. B. Johnson of Newburyport, Mass., says: "To say I am pleased with the Osmo-Chemic system of medicine would be but feebly expressing my real feelings toward this institution, where so much good is being done. I went to them suffering from a very serious stomach trouble, that made my life one of continual torture. I have friends that they cured some years ago, and it was through their efforts that I was induced to take the treatment, as I had given up hopes of ever getting any relief. I kept going and going, until I felt some change. I would get discouraged, but my friends would urge me to keep going, until finally I felt as if I had a new stomach installed. To go on and tell the different stages I went through would involve too much space. It is enough for me to say that the Osmo-Chemic physicians have done wonders in my case, and I deem it my duty to let the world know of this wonderful institution and the wonders achieved in my case."—(Signed) G. B. JOHNSON.

TWICE SUCCESSFUL

Mr. Herman Schuchhart of 30 Waverly Ave., Everett, Mass., says: "I was treated two years ago by the Osmo-Chemic physicians, and was so pleased with the result at that time that when I found myself compelled to have something done for a very bad kidney and bladder trouble, I at once went to them. I was suffering intensely with a distressed feeling across me, that would not yield to any treatment I had tried. After taking a few treatments with the Osmo-Chemic physicians I began to improve. Now I have no trouble with my kidneys whatever."—(Signed) HERMAN SCHUCHHART.

SAN FRANCISCO FISH MARKET ON CLAY STREET WRECKED BY EARTHQUAKE SHOCK

This view will give an idea of the extent of the damage done in Clay street, where the fishermen of San Francisco plied their trade. It was known as Palladini's Market, and Palladini, who owned the tugs used by the fishermen, was one of the victims of the disaster. At the time the earthquake came, shortly after 5 o'clock in the morning, the market was a very busy spot. Besides Palladini, a number of others were caught under falling walls. As the picture shows, there were also a number of horses, hitched to wagons, that were killed by the crash which followed the quake.

matter as far as possible with their own limited accommodation, and it is understood that a kind of registration bureau has been opened in Oakland; can only suggest that interested parties telegraph the Examiner, the Call and Chronicle, who at present are best informed as to the location of prominent individuals. To appreciate this situation it is to be borne in mind that San Francisco covers twenty-five square miles and that all street car lines and usual methods of local transportation are still unavailable and inoperative."

HEARST TRAIN FROM NEW YORK ON WAY

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Loaded with 280 tons of provisions, clothing, medical and surgical supplies, sewing machines and other necessities that Hearst's San Francisco Examiner has asked the New York American to forward, a fourteen-car train left New York last night.

Thousands of dollars more poured into the American-Journal San Francisco Relief fund yesterday, swelling the total to $165,239.31. It is now certain that this fund will within a week amount to $200,000.

Eva Booth has given to the fund $5,000, the first of the money collected by the Salvation Army for San Francisco relief, and it will be expended in the stricken city by Salvation Army officials.

The Hearst San Francisco relief train of fourteen cars, each so fully packed that there scarcely is room for another pound, is now speeding westward on passenger schedule time. Eight of the cars contained a varied assortment of goods, contributions made by American and Journal readers. Two cars contain sewing machines, and there is one car each of disinfectants, women's dress goods and findings, infants' supplies and miscellaneous hospital and sanitary supplies.

When it is remarked that the train is scheduled to make the run to Chicago in twenty-eight hours some idea may be had of the speed for the whole distance.

TOTAL OF $21,000,000 RAISED FOR VICTIMS

NEW YORK, April 26.—The local relief fund this morning was close to the $4,000,000 mark, and will pass it before to-morrow if the contributions continue to flow in with anywhere near the volume they have averaged since the fund was started. The seven days since the catastrophe have averaged nearly $3,000,000 each from all over the country, and have brought the total of the whole fund up to about $21,000,000.

By far the greater part of the fund is in now, and from this time on the task of the relief committee will be its distribution in the wisest way.

The Metropolitan Opera stars who were so hard hit by the earthquake and fire themselves have decided to hold a benefit for the other sufferers on May 4. The benefit will be a continuous performance, beginning in the morning and lasting all through the day.

CHICAGO, April 26.—The Chicago relief fund for the San Francisco sufferers to-day reached a total of $780,000, or more than three-quarters of the $1,000,000 it was planned to raise.

With this big fund to draw on the executive committee of the Commercial Association will meet to-day to consider the sending of a third relief train and the forwarding of money.

LILLIAN RUSSELL TO GIVE BENEFIT AT TREMONT SUNDAY

Lillian Russell and her all-star vaudeville company will appear at the Tremont Theatre next Sunday night for the benefit of the San Francisco sufferers. This is Miss Russell's only appearance in Boston this season. Her company includes Rice and Prevost, Jack Norworth, Greene and Werner, Chevalier DeLoris, Edna Luby, Canfield and Carlton, Ed Blondell and his company, Mazarto the Great and N. C. Burkhart. Seats will be on sale Friday at regular theatre prices.

DAUGHTER OF H. M. WHITNEY WEDS TO-DAY

Becomes Bride of Herman Lyman of Beacon Street at Church Ceremony.

Miss Ruth Whitney, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Whitney of Brookline, to-day became the wife of Herman Lyman, a society man of No. 39 Beacon street. The ceremony took place before a host of society friends in the First Parish Church at Brookline, at high noon, the Rev. William H. Lyon, pastor of the church, officiating, assisted by the Rev. Howard M. Brown. The interior of the church about the chancel, where the young couple stood, was prettily decorated with flowers and greens.

Arthur Lyman, brother of the groom, was the best man, and Miss Laura Whitney and Isabel Morris were bridesmaids. The ushers were R. T. Lyman, J. A. L. Blake, James S. Whitney, Richard Sears, Dr. A. C. Cabot and George B. Morrison.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Whitney home on Boylston street, Brookline.

The bride is well known in the younger society set of Brookline and the Back Bay, and is a most popular young woman. Mr. Lyman is a Harvard man, class '80, and is a member of the Somerset and Country Club, and other social organizations.

TREMONT BENEFIT NETS FUND $1,721.60

The receipts at the Tremont Theatre for the benefit to the San Francisco sufferers on Sunday evening, arranged by Manager Schoeffel and James K. Hackett, were $1,700.50. Walter M. Lowney & Co. gave $21.10, the proceeds of the evening's confectionery sales, making the total amount turned over to Kidder, Peabody & Co. $1,721.60.

MONTPELIER FUND $1,315 AND GROWING

MONTPELIER, Vt., April 26.—At a meeting of the B. P. O. Elks, held here last evening, the sum of $100 was voted to the San Francisco relief fund. Mrs. Josephine Pollard of Chicago sent a check of $15 yesterday. The Montpelier fund now amounts to $1,315, and subscriptions are still coming in. The I. O. Eagles will send $25 to-day.

PACKED JURY WILL GIVE HEARING ON CITY LIGHTING

City Council Committee, Anxious to "Learn," Plans $4,000 Junket for "Information."

The Committee on Municipal Lighting of the Boston City Council wants to learn a lot about the subject, and a hearing is to be held at the Common Council Chamber next Wednesday at 2:30 p. m. It is announced that at this meeting "those in favor of municipal lighting may express their views."

There are fifteen members of the committee—eight Councilmen and seven Aldermen. Two of them are open-minded on the subject—Alderman Linehan and Councilman McCullough. The others have already aligned themselves as being opposed to allowing the people to even vote on whether they want municipal ownership or not. This being the case, it is to be expected that the hearing will be a very serious and profitable affair. It will, however, be appreciated by the public that "those in favor of municipal lighting may express their views," even if they do start with the knowledge that no attention will be paid to what they say.

Big Junket Proposed.

The committee expects to do some much more important work than hear the views of the public. It realizes that there is much it could learn about the subject, and it hopes to be able to learn by practical investigation. A considerable number of the members think it would add to their ability to report (the unfavorable recommendation that they have been appointed to make must be in before September 1) if they could observe how municipal ownership works in other cities. The farther the cities are from Boston, and the more beautiful the route of travel, the better they feel they could profit by the trip.

They realize that they could learn much in the South during the beautiful weather of Spring, and in the North and West during the heat of Summer. While they were visiting the various cities where municipal ownership is operative "those in favor of municipal lighting might express their views." It wouldn't cost, they think, more than $3,000 or $4,000.

Will "See" the Mayor To-day.

A sub-committee expects to visit Mayor Fitzgerald to-day to learn if he will encourage the expenditure of money for a trip to gather evidence. At this meeting at least one person who is NOT in favor of municipal lighting may express his views.

Next Wednesday's hearing promises to be a delightful occasion. The committee will extract much humor from it, if any appear to give their views.

NEWSBOYS TO GIVE TITHE OF THEIR DAILY EARNINGS

The newsboys of Boston will hustle to-morrow for the relief of the earthquake sufferers. Ten per cent. of their profits will be turned over to the BOSTON AMERICAN to be forwarded to the Pacific coast.

This action was taken at a meeting of the Newsboys' Union. The little fellows were unanimously and enthusiastically in favor of the project to give one-tenth of their day's profits for the cause of charity.

The boys will be on the streets early to-morrow and will vie with each other in trying to make sales.

Encourage the boys by buying papers. Do not be careful about collecting your change. It all means needed help for the homeless people of California.

"Evening papers! Evening papers!"

Listen for this cry to-morrow. Go down into your pockets and buy one and pay a good price for it.

OLD BALL PLAYER GIVES FORTY SKIRTS FOR 'FRISCO WOMEN

"Charlie" Ganzell, the famous National League catcher of a few years ago, is responsible for the gift of forty women's skirts for the Hearst Relief train. Mr Ganzell is a representative of the Columbia Skirt Company of No. 630 Washington street and his interest in the 'Frisco sufferers resulted in this donation to-day.

A. W. Wheeler & Co., No. 205 Friend street, donate to-day two dozen mattresses, two dozen pillows and two dozen quilts.

AMERICAN RELIEF TRAIN OFF TO-DAY

Spring Beds, Stores, Food, Clothing and Household Articles Sent to Suffering San Franciscans by Generous New England People.

The first BOSTON AMERICAN relief train carrying contributions for the San Francisco sufferers started from this city at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

The railroad company declared that the goods contributed through the BOSTON AMERICAN would be carried to the homeless and helpless people as fast as steam can take them. To-day's contributions go on a Chicago mail train by the way of Rotterdam Junction.

Other trains will be sent West as fast as supplies are received. Send in your contributions, and as rapidly as a train load is received the heavily laden cars will be sent on their long journey of mercy.

The American Spring Bed Manufacturing Company of Boston to-day sent 100 spring beds to be added to the large variety of supplies that is being sent in for the San Francisco sufferers. The contribution is an excellent one, as the supply of beds is somewhat lacking, and will bring comfort to many a worthy family in the stricken city.

The quality of the beds is of the very best and most durable kind. The springs are of the famous Columbia noiseless spring, of which the American Spring Bed Manufacturing Company are the sole proprietors and exclusive manufacturers.

The response to the BOSTON AMERICAN'S appeal for help has been general and generous. Nearly all of the business firms of Boston and surrounding cities have given something to assist in alleviating the situation in California.

One firm sent a number of cases of shoes. This was a practical contribution.

The Magee Furnace Company contributed seventy-four stoves. This will be one of the most appreciated gifts that can arrive in the desolated city.

Boston has not forgotten the Chinamen of the stricken city. By the BOSTON AMERICAN relief train will be sent to the penniless Chinamen of San Francisco 300 pounds of head rice and 100 pounds of Japanese rice for the Japanese sufferers of that city.

The committee that has taken up this phase of the situation is composed of Charles E. Holske of No. 14 Oxford street, Boston; Moy J. Orne and William F. Holske.

Any person in New England who wishes to contribute food, clothing, household articles or anything else that might be of benefit to the homeless victims of California's disaster may do so by forwarding whatever they may have to Shed No. 10, Doors 6 and 7, of the Fitchburg division of the Boston & Maine railroad.

Be careful about addressing your packages. They should bear this direction.

The contributions have been very generous. People who have not been able to give money have given household articles which are needed in the desolate region.

The first BOSTON AMERICAN relief train leaves to-day. Do not lose a minute in forwarding your contributions.

Do not forget that other trains will be dispatched as fast as supplies are received.

The telegram reads: "Supplies not arrived yet; abundant provisions here. Blankets and tents needed badly both in this city and San Francisco. Money may be required for moving destitute families to other localities."

The highest-grade, lowest-priced clothing that bears the Union Label is Morse-made.

If it's correct, it's at Morse's.
If it's at Morse's, it's correct.

The man who is able to buy his clothes without counting the pennies too closely is the man we had in mind when we made our $30 suits.

We give the choicest fabrics that are woven—tailoring of the very highest grade—hand work at all points where it will help.

There are three, possibly four, custom tailors who produce suits equally good. But they ask anywhere from $50 to $60.

Has anybody told you anything about our 43c. scarves? They're worth knowing.

CHIEF MULLEN HURLED FROM AUTO AT FIRE

Machine Wrecked on Way to West End Blaze; Occupants, Though Bruised, Hurry On.

Scores of Italian employes of the New England Reed Company, Green and Pitts streets, West End, flew down the fire escapes when it was discovered that the building was afire shortly before 8 a. m. to-day. Many of them were in the panic in the same building last December when one man was killed, many hurt and a number rescued by firemen.

On his way to the fire, Chief John A. Mullen and his aid, Lieutenant Joseph Webber, were thrown from their automobile to the pavement, when it crashed into a street-clock post. Chauffeur Frank Shea, making a sharp turn from Tremont street into Tremont Row, saw a woman directly in the path of the big auto. Clangs of the gong failed to move her from the middle of the narrow street where she stood apparently dazed.

Making a sharp turn Shea turned the auto to the sidewalk. Before he could reverse the power, the machine had struck the clock, overturned and sent the three men to the sidewalk. They were all bruised, but managed to regain their feet and hurry away to the fire. The machine, only in service a few weeks, was wrecked. The woman promptly disappeared in the crowd.

Great Array of Small Sales to Make Friday Popular

Every fibre of this mighty organization has been concentrated for a week upon the arrangement of these Friday sales. Manufacturing and distributing centers have been searched for extraordinary bargains, and every stock in the store has been ransacked for unusual bargain material. The object is the creation of a wonderfully popular bargain Friday—a Friday fraught with values that no other retail establishment can approach. We separate Friday from the rest of the week and advertise limited Sales because, in most instances, lots are so small that they will not last more then a few hours. If we did not adopt this method we could not tell you, through our advertising, that they were here at reduced prices. Sales begin at 9 o'clock and changes are made at 12 and 3. We do not guarantee lots to last, though most of them will. No Telephone or Mail Orders Filled.

"THE GREAT AUTO CHASE"

By Thompson Peel.

(To Be Continued To-morrow.)

CHAPTER XII.

A Glimpse of the Past.

FISKE rang the bell for his servant.

"I will have James see if Mr. Schmidt is at home and if he will come down," he explained.

James went out and returned after a few minutes to announce that Mr. Schmidt was at home and in bed, but would dress and be with them as soon as possible.

It was perhaps half an hour later that Mr. Schmidt, a heavy-faced German, entered the room. His eyes were swollen and troubled looking; Fiske regarded him with a great deal of interest, as he arose and placed a chair. The German refused to sit down and Fiske went to business at once.

"I am sorry to trouble you, Mr. Schmidt," he began soothingly. "I believe your automobile is No. 00431?"

"I haf no automobile," was the German's rather astonishing reply.

Fiske consulted the book again.

"You have sold it?" he inquired.

"I haf nod it," answered the German stubbornly.

"Then you must have sold it," persisted the detective.

"I haf de car vunce, but now I haf nod it. It iss mine nod any longer."

"But the auto did belong to you once?"

"I haf nod it," repeated the German.

"I think, Mr. Schmidt," said Fiske at last, "that you understand perfectly what I want to know, but for some reason of your own you will not give me a straightforward answer." He paused to light a cigar. "Now," he resumed, "if you do not answer my questions plainly and satisfactorily I will be compelled to put you under arrest."

The German gave him a startled glance. "I haf done noddings," he burst out. "I am bankruptcy, but I haf done noddings."

Fiske nodded as if satisfied.

"So you have been in the bankrupt court?" he asked.

"But I sell de auto first," the German rattled, volubly, "and I spend all de money before I am a bankruptcy."

"Ah, that's better, now," commented the detective, with a slight smile. "Now, please give me the name of the man to whom who sold your auto." He drew out paper and pencil as if to make a note of it.

"Nein," exclaimed the German. "I nod him know yet. A man said to me, 'I gif you five huntret'. I haf come to where I can no longer pay me, so I say, 'Done mit you.' I takes de money, and he goes off mit de auto. Yah!"

The detective snapped his fingers impatiently.

"Can you tell me what he looked like?"

"I see only de five huntret," he explained. "He may look like de duyvil—he may look like de angel—I see only de five huntret."

Despite further long questioning that was all the information Fiske could get out of Schmidt. At last he thanked him, and the German withdrew.

"It is evident, gentlemen," he explained to Morgan and West, "that our friends, the enemy, are not fools. They have cleverly obtained possession of an automobile registered in another man's name, so it will be difficult to trace them in that way."

"Don't you suspect any connection between Schmidt and the thieves?" inquired West. "Do you believe his story?"

"Yes, I believe it. He was on his guard because of the bankruptcy proceedings. He probably failed to schedule the automobile in his assets and has the money hidden away. I was suspicious of him at first, but his story was straight enough if you take that view of it."

"It's a clever lot—the thieves," commented Morgan.

"But sometimes people are too clever, Mr. Morgan," said the detective. "It's just for that little break in their plans that we must watch and wait for."

"Now," he said, "I should like to ask you a few questions, and I hope you will not regard them as impertinent, because if you wish to help me run down these thieves and abductors you can do it best by giving me every fact in your possession."

"You may remember," said the detective, "that besides Miss Taylor, you also told Miss Pierce of the sale of 'The Green Blaze.' Now, as you have not been in this country for several years, will you tell me how it is that you are acquainted with these ladies?"

"That's easy enough," Morgan answered readily. "One of them just happened to be an old sweetheart of mine, and when I set eyes on her there in the railroad station I knew her in a minute. The young lady, Miss Taylor, was her pupil. I spoke to Kate and she knew me. She wasn't Kate Pierce then—she was Kate Sargent——"

"Sargent! Sargent!" exclaimed Fiske suddenly. "Kate Sargent! Just a moment, Mr. Morgan." He consulted an index. "Is that Kate Sargent?" he asked.

"Well, upon my soul," exclaimed Morgan. "It's Kate just as I knew her before I went to Australia. So you know her, Mr. Fiske?"

"I can't say that I exactly know her," Fiske replied, "but I generally indorse these little mementoes. Let's see what I wrote on the back of Miss Sargent's photograph. 'November, 1886, sentenced to five years penal servitude for extensive frauds. Supposed to have accomplice, named Leonard Simms. Refused to incriminate him. Simms never found.'"

"Leonard Simms?" shrieked Morgan suddenly.

AMERICAN LEAGUE BASEBALL GROUNDS, Philadelphia, April 26.—With the great Waddell out of the way, the Boston Pilgrims plucked up courage and got up all energy to put the Elephants to rout in the second contest.

The home team had no intention of dying easy prey at the hands of the Beaneaters, and got into line with the same speed and action that has been the cause of their being at the top of the list.

The Hub vets could never negotiate the Rube's delivery satisfactorily, but figured that any other twirler in the locals' stable would be easy picking for them.

Quaker fans are positive that the Collins men have not struck their real gait yet, but will come up with a rush, which is likely to start any time.

What puzzles the local fans is the inability of the Hubites to bat heavier. The timber is there, but the mystery exists when the sticking is wanted for it fails to appear.

George Winter was the one selected by Collins to give the Phillies a setback, and the youngster never went into a contest with more fire in his eye and a determination to flop his opponents.

Yesterday's defeat for the Bostons was taken in a very philosophical manner by Manager Collins.

"There was simply nothing to it. We could not hit Waddell and had nothing more coming to us than what we got. The Rube was invincible. Such form so early in the season certainly speaks well for Waddell's arm."

Connie Mack was a very happy man to-day, appreciating evidently the fact that his clever although decidedly eccentric pitcher was himself once more.

On Account of Illness, Keene's Great Colt

SYSONBY WON'T RACE

NEW YORK, April 26.—Announcement was made on behalf of James R. Keene yesterday that his great racer Sysonby will be unable to fill any of his early stake engagements this Spring, and Mr. Keene does not know when the horse will be able to run. This is the result of an attack of skin disease, known technically as "variole," from the effects of which the horse has been suffering for some weeks, and last week the disease assumed a most virulent phase, causing the racer intense pain.

This has made it necessary for his trainer, James Rowe, and two veterinary surgeons to attend Sysonby constantly, so much as to prevent Mr. Keene's trainer from being in attendance at Aqueduct for nearly a week. The horses which have been running from day to day at that track in Mr. Keene's interests have been under the care of Thomas Green, who formerly trained some of Mr. Keene's racers, and who now is assistant trainer to Rowe.

Mr. Keene's principal object in taking the public into his confidence is to save them from wagering upon Sysonby in any of the ante-post betting books, in which he was favorite at 6 to 1, notwithstanding his heavy impost of 131 pounds.

Great regret will be expressed by lovers of a high-class horse when they learn of Sysonby's temporary incapacity.

The loss of the horse's services will be costly to his owner. The horse is now in a fair way to recover from his affliction.

Sysonby was in the Metropolitan, Brooklyn, Suburban and Brighton Handicaps, all four of which have a gross value of $90,000. He is also in many weight-for-age races. Last year he won upward of $140,000, and was never beaten. It is said that an offer of $200,000 was once made for him, but this has never been confirmed.

BIG BENEFIT AT HUB WILL BE A CORKER

One of the sportiest benefits ever held in Boston will be the one at the Hub Theatre next Saturday night in aid of the San Francisco sufferers.

All the boxing talent in town as well as the wrestlers will be on hand to keep the ball a-rolling, and Carl Lathrop, Charley Waldron and Harry Farren will supply a bunch of vaudeville celebrities that will make every moment a merry one.

Tickets are going fast and subscriptions are coming in by every mail from the sporting fraternity. Tickets are now on sale at the Hub Theatre or can be obtained from the sporting editor of the BOSTON AMERICAN.

It is not often that the sporting fraternity of Boston is asked to contribute to a benefit, but when the time comes they are quick to respond.

The chances are that the Hub Theatre will not be large enough to hold the crowds on Saturday night. Some of the outside subscriptions so far received are:

He is to box Gleason in Philadelphia Saturday night, and then Monday takes on Jack Lowry in New York.

SOUTH END GROUNDS, Boston, April 26.—It seemed to be the regular thing for the Tenneyites to wipe the ground up with the Trolley Dodgers, and with five straight in the sack, a continuation of the same kind of treatment was looked for in the second game in the Hub series.

Patsy Donovan was on the verge of collapse at the constant hammering his team received, but still hoped that things would break right for him after the close argument that resulted in the first game here.

A little strong language had the desired effect, and the players got down to business with more life and were bound to break the spell of defeats that has been following them.

The mixups of yesterday were cut out of the playing and the visitors got going fast to do the trimming.

The locals offered Pfeffer up for the sacrifice. He did the trick properly against the Dodgers when last they met, but it looked as if he went to the well once too often.

Donovan pulled out the great spit ball artist, Stricklett, who had his wares showing at their best.

N. E. A. A. A. U. CHAMPIONSHIPS

Entries for the N. E. A. A. A. U. boxing championships will close on Monday. The winners of the first and second prizes at the tournament which will be held at Mechanics' Hall on May 7, will be considered whenever intercity bouts with New York, Philadelphia and Chicago are being arranged. Thus those who compete will have an added incentive besides the medals offered and the honor and glory.

MURPHY CAN'T BOX.

John Oliver, manager of Tommy Murphy, has signed an agreement with the Lincoln Club not to allow his boy to box anywhere outside of New York in three round bouts before he boxes Matty Baldwin at the Chelsea Club.

STAR PITCHERS OF PILGRIMS

These pictures were taken by a BOSTON AMERICAN staff photographer, while the Boston Pilgrims were playing their series in Washington.

Jesse Tannehill has pitched two games for the Boston club this season and has won both. In one of the games he went in against Jack Chesbro of the Highlanders, and was victorious, 2 to 0. His second victory was against the Senators, 19 to 2. "Tanny" was the winning Boston pitcher last season.

JESSE TANNEHILL.

"CY" YOUNG.

Cy Young is in just as fine form as ever in his seventeen years of major league pitching. Yesterday's game was the first time has has not been in proper shape, and he was batted out of the box in quick time by the Athletics. In his other games this season Young has done good work.

HARVARD NINE BLANKS BATES

Harvard defeated Bates on Soldiers Field yesterday afternoon by a score of 4 to 0. Up to the fourth inning the game was exceedingly close, when the Crimson boys began to bunch their hits, which netted three runs. Greene pitched a good, consistent game throughout. Only twice during the game did the Bates players reach third base, and then to be put out. Snyder succeeded Greene for Harvard in the sixth inning, and at no time did the Bates men worry him.

M'GARRY HAD SEIGER TIRED

NEW YORK, April 26.—Amby McGarry showed excellent form in a fast four-round bout with Charley Seiger of Hoboken at the Metropolitan A. C. The two kept pegging away at each other during the entire struggle. McGarry landed the most punches and did the bulk of the leading. In the fourth round McGarry's body blows began to tell and Seiger was tired and wabbling at the bell.

LANGFORD MEETS JOHNSON TONIGHT

Two of the fastest colored fighters in the country face each other at the Lincoln A. C. to-night, as Jack Johnson holds the medal for the heavyweight division and there are none better than Sam Langford, the Hub carving artist.

Langford is taking on a big job when he assumes that he can beat such a scientific man as Johnson, but he has handled fighters as heavy and cleverness is no good against Langford's style of battle unless there is an equal amount of hard hitting powers and cleverness combined that Langford has.

He has retired them all. Peter Jackson, Jeanette, Larry Temple, and there is no one his weight who can match him.

They will box straight rules and can clout each other all the time, allowing of lots of sneaking in punches at close range.

The appearance of Rudolph Unholz, the lightweight champion of South Africa, against Kid Murray in the semi-final, has created some interest. If successful Unholz will be immediately matched to box Arthur Cote.

In the opening bout Tommy Murray of Jamaica Plain will box six rounds with Denny Ryan of Cambridge.

HARVARD TRIES NEW FOOTBALL RULES MONDAY

According to the announcement of Captain Foster of the Harvard football eleven, the Crimson gridiron warriors will go out next Monday afternoon for their first regular Spring practice.

A meeting of football men will be held Friday night at 7 o'clock in the Lower Massachusetts Hall. At this meeting all the plans for Spring practice will be announced.

Captain Foster says that by the announcement of practice that it does not mean that intercollegiate football has been sanctioned at Harvard, but it is for the sole purpose of getting acquainted with the new style of play. He says that such practice would be held even though intercollegiate football were to be abolished.

REYNOLDS VS. OMAN.

RACING AUTOS BARELY SAVED FROM FLAMES

BY J. C. KERRISON

Special to the Boston American.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., April 26.—Heroic work on the part of the motorists and the local fire department saved many of the fast cars entered for the races from becoming victims of the fire fiend. Several of the cars were being tuned up in a local garage early this morning, when a tongue of flame leaped up the wall, setting fire to the big gasoline tank in one corner. While the owners and mechanics hastened to get their cars out of the place several of the men picked up chemicals and dashed the same on the blaze. Others endeavored to smother the flames with bagging and sand.

By the time the fire department arrived the flames were under control and the fire was easily extinguished. It was a warm session for some little time. Strenuous measures were indeed necessary to get the machines away from the fire, save the day an the races. By energetic work all the cars were removed from the vicinity of the flames. The only one to be at all injured, and that was only scorched a little, was Mrs. Cuneo's White, which was about the first to get on to the street.

Harry Houpt's Thomas, Harry Maynes in his record-breaking Grout, the two Pope Toledos, the Stoddard-Daytons, Wayne and the Red Bird were the cars stored in this garage.

Had the fire assumed any large proportions there would have been a cleaning out of the autos entered for the afternoon's event. The quick work of the motorists and the fact that the garage is as fireproof as possible saved the day and the races.

H. E. Rogers of Boston, who yesterday captured the steam race, and that, too, in better time than was made by Durban at the Ormond tournament, is anxious to go against the mile record, and will be given a chance. He will endeavor to get the mile down to thirty-five seconds, but will hardly do so to-day, as a heavy wind is blowing.

SKILLEN DIDN'T ALLOW A HIT

Special to the Boston American.

Providence, April 26.—Dartmouth won from Brown, 1 to 0, in a pitchers' battle on Andrew's field yesterday. Tift pitched to Paine for the losers and Skillen served them up to Main for the boys from Hanover, and struck out eleven men and did not allow a hit. Dartmouth got three singles, two of which were bunched. Up to the fifth inning, one man reached second and only three men went to bat for either team each inning. An error by Dickinson in the fifth let McLane on first. Tift struck out the next two, and Driscoll and Page each got singles and McLane scored.

CHRISTIE MAKES RECORD.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., April 26.—The first day's racing of the second Atlantic City auto tournament produced some excellent competition between fast touring cars, and one's world's record, a mile from a standing start in fifty-three seconds, by Walter Christie.

GRADUATE CREWS MAY HAVE RACE

NEW YORK, April 26.—A special race for graduate crews from Harvard, Yale and Columbia is proposed as an attraction for the Columbia Spring regatta, which will be held on the Hudson River early next month. Manager Bogue of the Columbia crews has received assurances that Yale will form such a crew, and Harvard is likely to do the same. Columbia already has a graduate crew in training. The race will be a short distance affair, so as not to tax too severely the endurance of the men, who have been out of training for some time. A suitable trophy will be given.

It was announced yesterday at Columbia that the old quarters of the Columbia crew at Red Top, near Krum Elbow, had been engaged for another season. The owners came down in their demands to something like a satisfactory price, and the chances of leaving the Poughkeepsie course this season therefore are rather slim.

There is a merry fight going on in the Columbia varsity boat for seats among the bow trio. This part of the eight is the weaker and there is consequently a better chance for an able-bodied novice. Norris, McLean, Roy, Cheadle, Short and Tonnele are scrapping hard for the places.

Feeding the Brain

is a process involving something more than nutritious food. The blood-current which distributes it is more important than all.

IF THE LIFE-CURRENT

Be rich and pure, it invigorates the brain cells and leaves its nutrition behind. But if the blood be impoverished and loaded with germs of disease, these poisons are also deposited.

THE INEVITABLE RESULT is a weakening of the forces of life, leading to paralysis in some cases, insanity in others, sluggishness and dullness of intellect in all.

I FREE THE BLOOD-STREAM

From all impurities, and give the red blood cells a chance; nature can be depended upon for the rest. You may consult me free of charge.

Dorothy Dix Advises All Active Members of the Kickers' Club to Resign and JOIN THE MERRY JOLLYING LEAGUE

Adopt a Glad Hand for Your Emblem and Use Soft Soap Instead of a File on Your Acquaintances

By Dorothy Dix

EVERY now and then we hear that a lot of disgruntled people have gotten together and formed a Kickers' Club.

I would like to offset this by organizing a Jollying League, with the glad hand for an emblem.

Somewhere in every Anglo-Saxon breast there is a deep, dark-blue, pessimistic strain that makes us feel that everything that is pleasant and agreeable is wrong, and that it is our duty to comment loudly and long upon the faults and weaknesses of our friends and family, and to keep silent concerning their virtues.

This point of view is so universal that we accept it, even when we are the victims of it. When a candid individual presents us gratuitously with a biting criticism upon our conduct, or our looks, we never dream of even suspecting that it was inspired by anything but the highest and most altruistic motives.

On the other hand, when we are paid a compliment, no matter how much we may deserve it, we immediately get out a searchlight and go to exploring the why and the wherefore of the gracious speech, while we mentally congratulate ourselves upon being too clever to be worked by means of flattery.

Why is this? Why do we respect the person who says a disagreeable thing to us, and suspect the one who says agreeable things to us? Why is the chronic fault-finder accounted sincere and the flatterer a hypocrite?

Surely the animal—the jackass—that is the headliner kicker of the world, is not celebrated either for his wisdom or his ability to get there.

Why Fear Praise?

NOBODY knows why we have such a dread of using a little soft soap instead of a file upon each other.

We only know that we have a vague fear of praise and regard it pretty much as we do an Anarchist's bomb, that if thrown into the family circle or an office or store would explode and blow things to pieces.

This is in direct contradiction to one of the fundamental laws of nature, for we all know that we can be led where we can never be driven; that we may possibly distrust, but we certainly adore the lips that say honeyed words to us, and that we work ourselves to death on the bare chance that somebody will praise us after we are dead, and carve a compliment on our tombstones.

As the puny babe is to the prize-fighter, as the Summer breeze is to the resistless hurricane, as the kitchen knife is to the Damascus blade, so is the power of blame to praise, and there is no other marvel in the world equal to the stupidity we show in making use of the lesser force, the duller weapon, when the better one is ready to our hands.

Take, for instance, the domestic relationship where, after a lifetime of fault-finding, no tangible results can be found.

Many a man has criticised his wife's biscuits every morning for thirty years and found them still open to the same stricture. Many a woman has told her husband what she thought of his stinginess seven times a week, fifty-two weeks in a year, for forty years, and had him still dole out carfare to the day of her death.

So little does blame move us.

Praise Is Valuable.

HOW different would have been the results had the man praised his wife's housekeeping and assumed that she was a cordon bleu as a cook. Then, at the slightest intimation that the bread was not up to her usual exalted standard, she would have gotten busy with the cook book, and there would never have been reason for complaint again.

Look about you, and you will see that the women who are breaking their necks to please their husbands, and who are pinching and economizing at every point, are the women married to astute gentlemen who are adepts at jollying.

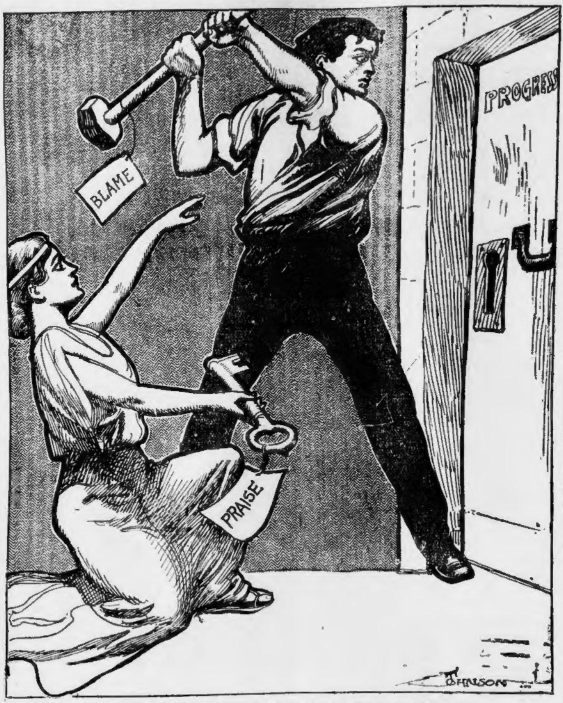
Tell a woman that she is pretty, and she will spend hours before her looking glass making herself a living picture.

Tell her that she is a financier, and she will prove it to you. Tell her that she is anything that you want her to be, and she will be it, for woman is a chameleon that can change color to match her background while you look at her.

Nor are men less insensible to praise. The women who have good husbands are the women who are liberal with compliments, and who sing a man's virtues to him rather than harp on his defects.

As for children, an ounce of jolly is worth a ton of fault-finding for converting them into the thing you wish. Tell the baby that falls down that it is too brave to cry, and it will choke back its sobs.

Encourage vanity? I don't know. There is just a natural human tendency to live up to our blue china, and be as fine as people think we are.



WHY NOT USE THE KEY INSTEAD OF THE SLEDGE?

Keep the Sacred Name of Mother Out of the Mire

By Winifred Black

MRS. LIZZIE WALTERS of Pittsburg testified in open court the other day that she had lived a wretched life for over ten years for the sake of her little daughter.

The daughter, now a girl of over fourteen, sat in the courtroom and heard, for the first time in her life, what manner of woman her mother was.

She had been brought out of a convent to testify in the case.

When her mother admitted that she was what she is, the girl shrieked and fell senseless upon the floor.

I wonder if that pitiful wretch really thinks she means what she says when she says a thing like that.

For her daughter's sake!

If she loved the girl, why didn't she put her in an orphan asylum or bind her out to some cruel master who would put her into a factory to work from dawn till dark before she was scarcely old enough to comb her own hair?

Or why didn't this woman, who pretends that she loves her daughter, throw her into the river, or shoot her, or kill her by slow starvation?

Any one of these things would have been better for the child than to do what she did do.

For the sake of the child, this woman says, for the sake of the clothes she could buy for the little girl to wear.

What an insanity of greed it must be to put such ideas even into an unbalanced brain!

If she had marked the child's face with the letter "A" in red-hot irons it would have been better for her than to bring her up the daughter of such a mother.

If a child cannot honor the name of her own mother, what is there on this earth for her to honor? If a good name, honestly borne, will not make your children proud of you, what will? A few rags of gaudy clothes?

A box of candy once a week and half a dozen pairs of silk stockings to be worn on fete days?

Mrs. Lizzie Walters, you may think you mean what you say, but I don't believe you do.

I strongly suspect that you really mean that you were too lazy to work, and too selfish to give up your own ease to spend your life bringing up this little girl you pretend to love.

It was easy for you to put her in a convent and pay her tuition there; the tuition was cheap; why, the cost of a case of champagne would pay it for a month, and daughter was out of the way.

Why don't you own up to the miserable truth? You were bad enough to live the life you have, now be decent enough to own up to the only motive which could have inspired you to lead it.

You are like the women who live with husbands they detest and say they do it for the children's sake, when they really do it because it is an easy way to get board and clothes. Don't profane the sacred name of mother by dragging it in such mire as this.

JACK HARKAWAY'S SON

CHAPTER XLI.

Revelations That Startle

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner

JACK was to kill Edwards. This was the first task of the many he had agreed to do in accepting Grierson's terms.

Jack strove his best to keep the old man from seeing the loathing that rose up within him.

That he was successful was due more to the captain's advanced state of intoxication than to his own self-control.

"All right," he said, with a gulp. "When do you want it done?"

"Right now," said Grierson. "The sooner the scoundrel is overboard and dead the better."

Jack rose to leave the cabin. To carry out his plans he felt that it would be necessary to conceal Edwards for a few days, until he should finally have things working so it would make no difference what the old rascal wanted.

But he had reckoned without Grierson's cunning.

The old man was watching him under his bushy eyebrows, and called him back as he started to cross the cabin threshold.

"There's another thing, Harkaway, I want you to do," he said. "It isn't that I distrust you especially, but I have always made it a rule to see that my orders are carried out myself. I don't care to be present when you remove our friend from the scene of his troubles, nor do I need to ask you how you intend to do it. But just as an evidence of good faith, you know, you might bring me his head when you have done with the job."

"His head!" gasped Jack.

"Yes, his head. I might say one of his ears, or his nose, but it would be so easy for an accomplished man like you to nip off one of the features of some member of the crew and toss him overboard. I think I could recognize the remains of Edwards better if I saw the whole head.

"And now get about it, for the devil knows what the fellow may be planning while you wait. He was irritated this morning because I had the bos'n drive a marlinspike into his arm for insubordination."

He readily saw that he was dealing with an abler man than he supposed. Grierson was not to be hoodwinked with any seeming willingness to fall in with his plans.

He was putting Jack to a test, and Jack well knew that the test would disclose the facts and probably result in his own death.

As he staggered up the companionway he was astonished to meet Edwards coming down. He shuddered when he saw the man go into the cabin, for he feared he might never come out alive. But he was soon to receive a new surprise.

Edwards passed him without a sign of recognition. Fearing lest the man was walking unknowingly to his fate, Jack ran softly up to the deck and lay beside the transom, where he could hear what was going on inside the cabin.

He was not surprised to hear Grierson greet the second mate pleasantly, for he knew the aged reprobate would conceal his feelings, but when the conversation between the two had progressed a little the listener's hair began to rise.

For Grierson after relating the conversation that had just passed between Jack and himself, said calmly:

"I knew he wouldn't do it. If he'd agreed to, of course, we might have made him one of us. But the white-livered dog is afraid of murder, and if he isn't twenty fathoms under the sea before night you and I will have a falling out."

"He'll go all right," said Edwards, and added: "You'll have his head to prove it as soon as I can tear it from his smug shoulders."

THE treatment for changing the nose, as indicated in the above cuts, is so simple that if people who have this type of nose but knew it, they would not hesitate a moment to have it done. There is no cutting, no pain and no detention from business; it requires but a few moments; is not costly and in all cases makes a wonderful improvement in one's appearance.

All other work done by us is equally simple and effective. Don't think other people are used to your nose because you are; they notice it every time they see you. Thousands every year have their noses attended to, so why not you?

It costs nothing for full information, so call and see us, or write at once. Consultation free.

Have Love Letters Gone Out of Style?

WHEN letters cost more than a penny to send them by post writing them was deemed an art, and when writing an ordinary epistle was so dignified writing a love letter was a deed glorified exceedingly.

But now it is easier to spend fifty cents on a telegram or to ring the beloved one up on the telephone than to write to her. And if she insists upon letters, what more handy than the typewriter—that blisterer of romance—upon which to tap off a few messages of love?

Every sympathy may be felt for the girl who would rather have no letters at all than the inhuman documents the typewriter inscribes.

The printlike caligraphy of that useful commercial instrument is hideous when compared to the irregularities of the scrawl of the beloved individual, which shows, as plainly as if he spoke, here, where his pen ran away with him and the hot words almost blistered the page; there, where he halted to realize the full measure of the rapture he wished to express.

Yet there are lovers who still expect epistles from one another every day, and there are those who stand to the letter of the law so literally that one receives on Monday morning a double allowance of missives because of the absence of a Sunday post.

Perhaps such devoted couples are the few who keep up the ancient fashion of pouring out their hearts on paper; or do they merely write a sober record of the day's doings, with ever and anon apologies for "only a few lines to-day, such heaps to do and no time to get through anything"? Anathemas on that demon doing, if he be the slayer of true love letters.

Great men have nearly always comprehended the importance of letter writing as an accomplishment and many of them have made it a recreation and a resource in times of stress and mental tension. And Stonewall Jackson, whose name stands as a synonym for the life strenuous wrote letters to his second wife (the first one living only fourteen months after her marriage to him) brimful of ardent love.

My pet, my darling, my sunshine, my little somebody, he would call her, this great being whose life was sacrificed for his country.

Love letters have played their part as balm to wounds that otherwise would have bled unstanched many and many a time.

It was when he heard how his poor little wayward wife had treasured his letters to her that Lord Melbourne, after Lady Melbourne's death, knew that the old love he had felt for her, that he had deemed killed by her many strange perversities, was really there, really hers, never to be obliterated.

Wrapped up in lavender, with blue ribbon bound, should every true lover's missives be kept, to be the sweetest memory of old age, and, perchance, of isolation, a woman can possess.

GIVE! GIVE!! GIVE!!!

SAYS BEATRICE FAIRFAX

SAN FRANCISCO'S terrible disaster is teaching us some wonderful lessons. The first and most beautiful of all is charity.

Men, women and children have given gladly what they could. Many of them have sacrificed some coveted luxury in order that they might make their donation larger. Never has the spirit of love and sympathy been more beautifully exemplified.

The generous response to San Francisco's need shows that we have learned the responsibility that we one and all bear toward our fellow-beings.

Where we know there is suffering it is our duty to help as much as possible—and we know that though millions of dollars have been subscribed to the relief fund there are still a great many things needed in San Francisco.

Hundreds of people are destitute of shoes, stockings, hats, coats and other articles of wearing apparel.

In their mad flight from the earthquake and fire they did not stop to clothe themselves properly, and they are homeless and shivering and miserable.

Anything that you can send will be welcome. Don't think your donation too small; remember that 300,000 people are destitute.

Address your contribution: "For the San Francisco Sufferers via BOSTON AMERICAN Relief Train, Fitchburg Division, B. & M. R. R., Boston, Mass. Deliver at Freight Depot No. 10; Doors 6 and 7 Warren Bridge."

The express companies will carry your goods free. The Salvation Army will take them and forward them. Or you may call the BOSTON AMERICAN, 'Phone 5180 Main, Boston, and your donations will be called for.

Perhaps you can spare a coat or a pair of shoes or a blanket.

Children's shoes and stockings would be a splendid thing to send.

Eight hundred babies were born during those three awful days.

Think of the baptism of fire that awaited those helpless mites.

They all need clothes; at present they are probably wrapped in any rags their poor mothers could get for them.

Malted milk, condensed milk, or canned foods of any kind will stand transportation and will be more than welcome.

Garments that your own children have outgrown will be sure to fit some little man or maid in San Francisco.

You must remember that those people are absolutely destitute; they have nothing but the clothes on their backs, and they are scanty enough.

It will be some weeks before things are at all settled, and in the meantime the 300,000 must eat and be clothed, they must have beds to sleep on and bedclothes to keep them warm.

Give what you can; even one handkerchief or a pair of stockings will be welcome. Only give and urge your friends to do likewise. The relief train will start as soon as it is loaded; do your share toward hastening its departure.

WITH painful effort he half carried, half dragged the dead man from the room, along the corridor, into the first floor room of the tower, where the spiders spun their webs in the darkness and those ten brass thimbles hung suspended. In the gloom, his mind on the brink of madness, induced by fear, Philip Haggard could almost have persuaded himself that the thimbles were stirring restlessly like sentient things, eager to be fitted to those inanimate fingers.

His task was done. Back from that accursed place in a very frenzy, driven before his fears as a hare hunted by the hounds. The heavy oak door was closed, the key turned and withdrawn. He reeled against the door, sick and faint.

He must take a heavy sleeping draught to-night, else he would never sleep, and if he could not sleep he would go mad.

All Is Silent

Philip Haggard extinguished the lights in the library and went slowly to his bedroom, just as the clock in the hall began to strike the hour of midnight.

He paused silently in front of the door of the housekeeper's room, where the woman he feared was to sleep. All was silent within. He walked on with a vague sense of relief.

And inside the room, on the other side of the door, the girl was standing, listening—listening.

Olga Vail had not gone to bed. Though she had retired to the housekeeper's room an hour ago she was wearing the borrowed attire in which she had confronted the police in Philip Haggard's library.

The last stroke of midnight died away into slumbrous silence that enwrapped the house; there came to her ears the distant sound of Philip Haggard shutting his bedroom door, for which she had been waiting; she crossed over to the casement window, and opening it softly leaned out, looking intently across the sleeping grounds.

She stood irresolute for a moment, as though hesitating about the purpose that burned in her mind, like a statute of chrysolite in the ghostly radiance of the moon as it broke from the drifts of black clouds; then, as if in challenge to her irresolution she whispered to herself:

"Yes, I'll go—I must go!"

CHAPTER XIV.

The House of the Red Lamp.

QUICKLY Olga discarded the slippers she was wearing, put on her own strong shoes and crossed to the window again.

The old house was built after an irregular pattern, and the short flight of six stairs from the corridor to her room did not raise the window to any great distance from the garden level; the interlaced strands of tough ivy that framed it made the task of descent by no means difficult to one so determined as Olga Vail.

Cautiously she climbed out and dropped safely to the ground.

Olga took the path unhesitatingly, as though in some strange fashion the intricacies of the grounds were familiar to her. She walked on till suddenly through a break in the trees, that grew more thickly as she advanced, her eyes caught the tiny gleam of a red light, and she drew a deep breath as of relief.

Once she looked back at the great house with the square-built, ivy-grown tower rising from the north end to a lowering sky.

"Poor old place, that once was my home," she was saying to herself, "to have come back to you like this!"

The pathway through the trees ended in a gate opening upon a road that skirted one side of Philip Haggard's grounds.

The gate was fastened merely by a catch on the inside; nearly facing it on the other side of the deserted road stood a cottage, in the window of which the red-shaded lamp burned.

As the girl passed through the gate a face appeared for a moment at the window. Before Olga's fingers could tap at the door it opened.

"You've come at last, my darling," a voice exclaimed. "All day long I've been listening for your footsteps—I knew you would come. Oh, my dearie, my dearie!" and two arms were flung round Olga, and the woman whose face had appeared in the red lamplight laughed and sobbed in almost hysterical joy as she strained the girl to her bosom.

Mother Grim.

It was a small room, low and dark, in which Olga found herself.

"You expected me, Hagar?" Olga Vail asked in tones of surprise, patting the older woman's hand affectionately; "you have expected me all this evening? But how could you expect me when, until this evening, I was under arrest? I am a fugitive from the police"——

Hagar paused in the act of pulling forward a chair for the girl.

"A fugitive?" she echoed, with a quick look of alarm. "Then they haven't released you? You are in danger, dearie?"

Olga laughed reassurance.

"You wise old Hagar!" she cried, "you knew I was coming, and yet do not know that the police are hunting me! But the danger is past." The older woman's face cleared at the words. "How could you know?"

"How did I know, dearie? Haven't I had the feeling for days of footsteps coming to me, nearer and nearer? 'Whose footsteps?' says I. 'And why are you coming to old Hagar?' And to-day the footsteps drew closer—so nigh on me that all day I've been waiting, listening, feeling sure they weren't far off now."

"And you lit the lamp as a signal?" asked Olga, looking in puzzled wonder into the wrinkled face with the beady black eyes.

"No. The feet of him for whom that lamp burns are still far off. Many nights will it burn. Over much land and dividing water must he travel before the ravelled skein winds tight and draws him here," muttered Hagar, musingly. She paused abruptly, and turned to Olga. "But you are sure you are not in danger, dearie? There's no fear that they'll drag you back to that cruel prison?—that prison where old Hagar begged and pleaded to see you, and they wouldn't listen—only laughed in my face when I was almost mad to think of you, whom I had nursed as a baby, lying within the cruel wall!" she cried.

A woman of fifty or thereabouts, taller than the average man, and with a strength that would have been conspicuous even in a man, was Hagar Grimsdyke—known in the town as Mother Grim.

A Strange, Sad Story.

Mother Grim was more feared than liked; she went her own way, silent and reserved, having little to do with any one—except those who came to consult her as a "wise woman" who could cast a "charm" or brew strange decoctions of herbs for sick people and animals.

She had been bound up with Olga's earliest recollections; the grim, hard face had never been hard to her.

If this silent woman cared for no one else, she loved Olga as passionately as though she were her own child. That had been in the days when Olga's father lived at the big house—the debonair, handsome father of whom she had been so proud, until one black day, five or six years ago, she realized that this seemingly prosperous gentleman had been living a life of fraud.

Olga had found out, then, what she had not known before, why her father had left the army, learned of the old scandal that had been hushed up out of consideration for his family connections. It had often puzzled Olga that seemingly they had no relatives and no friends, until that hour of terrible exposure, when her father, bolting, was arrested and sentenced to penal servitude.

PIANO SLAUGHTER STORAGE SALE

A GREAT many people are ignorant of the fact that the best possible opportunity to buy a piano at the lowest possible price is to get one at the Storage Sale. Sometimes the finest pianos that are made go almost for a song. Some pianos of the best makes that have been used only slightly, and at that in the best of homes, are sold for prices that seem impossibly low. New and second-hand pianos are sold regardless of price.

Pianos go for prices much lower than an auction would bring. There is no one to bid at a piano storage sale, the price is simply put on; first come, first served, and the careful, economical man or woman who wants to buy a piano economically, in fact, more than economically, will watch the storage sales carefully.

The gilded piano stores, with their costly appointments, their high salaried sales agents, their sellers' commissions, etc., are no place for the economical piano buyer to go. Take the trouble to look around a little, go up where the rents are not so high and buy your piano right.

Several nice upright pianos which must be sold at a sacrifice; 2 nice uprights, Chickering and Vose, $40 and $50; nearly new mahogany uprights, 3 pedals, latest style, at ½ Boston prices; reason why, no large rents, big salaries or commissions to be paid; no fancy floors; our expenses about $5 a day; Boston warerooms' expense $300 to $500 daily; our terms the most liberal; free carting, free tuning and 3 months' lessons with each piano; why not see us at once and thus save the agents' enormous profits? SHAWMUT PIANO CO., 720A Shawmut av., Roxbury, Mass.; open till 9 P. M.

Mr. Carnegie Will Give San Francisco a Library

And San Francisco Will Give Mr. Carnegie SEVERAL MILLIONS. That Is How the World Runs. It Is Not Mr. Carnegie's Fault

Mr. Carnegie will undoubtedly give San Francisco one or more libraries when the time comes. He will render a real service to the city and its inhabitants. The time has gone by, fortunately, when cities used to feel that they needed jails more than libraries.

There is, however, another side to the transaction which must be mentioned, as it illustrates so beautifully modern conditions under the government of organized capital.

Mr. Carnegie, as you probably know, owns THREE HUNDRED MILLIONS in five per cent. bonds of the United States Steel Corporation.

San Francisco—the new San Francisco—will be A CITY OF STEEL.

The earthquake has proved that the STEEL building is the SAFE building and the building of the future.

Millions upon millions of dollars will be paid to the Steel Trust by the energy of San Francisco re-creating the city.

AND UNLESS CONGRESS SHALL TAKE THE DUTY OFF STEEL CONSIGNED TO SAN FRANCISCO, THE TRUST WILL MAKE THE PRICE ENORMOUSLY HIGH, AS USUAL.

Thus the city to which Mr. Carnegie, out of the generosity of his heart, will give one or two libraries, will in return, BY HARD COMPULSION, give to Mr. Carnegie several millions of dollars.

Mr. Carnegie's story of BIG wealth is short and interesting, and very American.

He was the principal owner in the great Carnegie iron business. He was willing to sell out if he could get an enormous price. He fixed his price at one hundred millions of dollars. Henry C. Frick, William B. Leeds and others gave Mr. Carnegie a million in cash for the right to buy his property at a hundred millions.

They tried to capitalize it at a hundred millions. They failed, and Carnegie kept the million-dollar forfeit. That caused the bitter fight between him and Frick.

Frick, William B. Leeds and the others told Mr. Carnegie that the hundred millions he asked for his property was RIDICULOUS. Carnegie said, "No." And he proved himself a wise Scotchman.

Just a little while after these men had failed to "float" his property at a hundred millions the broad-gauged Mr. Morgan came along with his United States Steel scheme, AND HE BOUGHT MR. CARNEGIE'S PROPERTY FOR THREE HUNDRED MILLIONS IN FIVE PER CENT. BONDS.

Consequently, the people of the United States when they put up a building, the people of San Francisco when they rebuild, the little man with a flat in the steel apartment house, must help to pay Carnegie five per cent. every year on THREE HUNDRED MILLIONS of dollars before they really begin to pay what the steel actually COSTS those who sell it.

Is this not a fine picture of American finance and of quick fortunes? AND HOW LONG DO YOU THINK A COUNTRY—EVEN THIS ONE—CAN STAND THIS KIND OF EXPLOITATION, THIS ROBBING OF THE PEOPLE, WITHOUT SOME DEFINITE CHANGE OR PROTEST?

Editorials Bound in Book Form

A Volume Has Been Prepared, at the Suggestion of Readers, and Is Now Ready

Readers at various times have asked that some of the editorials published in this newspaper be issued in book form. A number of important publishers, including Messrs. Harper & Bros. and Funk & Wagnalls, have expressed the opinion that such a book would be in demand, and have offered to publish it.

The suggestion has now been acted upon; and the book is ready for those that care to have it.

The book contains one hundred and six editorials, selected among several thousand. We should be interested to learn from those of our readers who may see the book whether they think that the selections have been wisely made.

The book can be obtained, postage prepaid, on receipt of one dollar sent to this office.

BUT WE SHOULD PREFER THAT YOU BUY IT OF YOUR NEWSDEALER. He will take your order and sell it to you at the same price, making his profit.

MEMORANDUM FOR NEWSDEALERS:

You can procure this book at wholesale prices through the circulation department of this newspaper or from the agent or news company that supplies you with the newspaper.

The City to Be

By Wex Jones

OUT of a city's wrack, where beggared mourners grope,
Out of the ashes and dust blossoms the flower of hope.

Again shall the city rise in her olden royal state,
A golden queen on her throne by the nation's Golden Gate.

So Columbia joins with all brave hearts by the Western sea
In a sigh for the city that was, a cheer for the city to be.

WHY DON'T DRESSMAKERS ORGANIZE?

W. R. Hearst, Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Being a constant reader of your valuable paper, I can't help feeling that your aim is to help all that need assistance and expose all wrong that may be righted. I am a dressmaker working for a large concern in Boston. My years of experience have shown me that ours is one of the most underpaid trades for women, considering the long hours and continuous hard work we are obliged to do to hold our positions.

I have read of women's labor unions. Could not the dressmakers be organized as well, in order to improve their condition? I hope this will start a movement to help us.

DRESSMAKER.

WANTS CARTOON ENLARGED.

W. R. Hearst, Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Your picture on the editorial page of the BOSTON AMERICAN, entitled "His Fairest Child," by Robert Carter, is the most speaking picture I have seen for many a day. Why not work it up on a larger scale as a supplement to the SUNDAY AMERICAN, so it can be framed? I think there would be thousands who would appreciate it as much as I do.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox

SESTINA

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner

I WANDERED o'er the vast green plains of youth,
And searched for Pleasure. On a distant height
Fame's silhouette stood sharp against the skies.
Beyond vast crowds that thronged a broad highway
I caught the glimmer of a golden goal,
While from a blooming bower smiled siren Love.

Straight gazing in her eyes, I laughed at Love,
With all the haughty insolence of youth,
As past her bower I strode to seek my goal.
"Now will I climb to glory's dizzy height,"
I said, "for there above the common way
Doth Pleasure dwell companioned by the skies."

But when I reached that summit near the skies,
So far from man I seemed, so far from Love—
"Not here," I cried, "doth Pleasure find her way."
Seen from the distant borderland of youth
Fame smiles upon us from her sun-kissed height,
But frowns in shadows when we reach the goal.

Then were mine eyes fixed on that glittering goal,
Dear to all sense—sunk souls beneath the skies.
Gold tempts the artist from the lofty height,
Gold lures the maiden from the arms of Love,
Gold buys the fresh ingenuous heart of youth,
"And gold," I said, "will show me Pleasure's way."

But ah! the soil and discord of that way,
Where savage hordes rushed headlong to the goal,
Dead to the best impulses of their youth,
Blind to the azure beauty of the skies;
Dulled to the voice of conscience and of love,
They wandered far from Truth's eternal height.

Then Truth spoke to me from that noble height,
Saying: "Thou didst pass Pleasure on the way,
She with the yearning eyes so full of Love,
Whom thou disdained to seek for glory's goal,
Two blending paths beneath God's arching skies
Lead straight to Pleasure. Ah, blind heart of youth,
Not up fame's height, not toward the base God's goal,
Doth Pleasure make her way, but 'neath calm skies,
Where Duty walks with Love in endless youth."

The Stenographer

No Woman Is Ever Miserable So Long as She Has the Price of a Dress Tucked Away in Her Pocket

By Dorothy Dix

"I SEE," observed the Bookkeeper, "that a man out in Ohio, who must be a bughouse candidate, is going around with a placard on his breast that has printed on it, 'I Am a Man.'"

"It's a good idea that ought to be pushed along," retorted the Stenographer, sarcastically. "I know plenty of trouseretted things that need to be labelled 'A Man' for purposes of identification. I have been fooled by 'em more than once."

"What did you take them for?" inquired the Bookkeeper.

"Donkeys and hogs," said the Stenographer, tartly. "They would have taken the prize in any animal show."

"Well," went on the Bookkeeper, in explanation, "it seems that the Ohio crank hones and pines to wear women's duds, and, after the police had run him in for exhibiting on his person the very latest thing in lingerie shirt waists and fifty-seven gored skirts, he got busy with the law and found out that a man had a perfect right to adorn himself in female apparel provided he didn't do the same with intent to deceive.

"Hence this thusness. He suspends around his neck a neat little badge that proclaims his sex, and that leaves him free to turn himself into a millinery confection."

"Poor soul!" exclaimed the Stenographer, compassionately. "I guess the Easter hats did it. I am not surprised. How anybody, male or female, young or old, could look at 'em without being crazy to have 'em, gets past me.

Women's Clothes

"THE only time when I am reconciled to being a woman is when I go shopping. Hand-embroidered shirt waists, and blue ostrich feathers, and pink chiffon are the rewards that a merciful Providence has bestowed upon the female sex in compensation for its not being eligible for much promotion in office, in business and being classed by the law with idiots, imbeciles and criminals.

"It's an awful thing not to be allowed to vote, but it's an awfuller one to have to wear a lot of ugly tubular clothes that look like they were cut out after the pattern of a joint of stove pipe."

"Men are not so vain as women are," declared the Bookkeeper; "they are not always thinking about their clothes."

"Well," said the Stenographer, "I am sorry for 'em if they don't. They miss one subject of perpetual interest that never palls from the cradle to the grave. As long as a woman has the price of a new dress in her pocket she's never wholly miserable, no matter what happens. Even death is robbed of its sting by the consolation of getting a complete new outfit of mourning.

That's the reason that women so seldom commit suicide. They just can't make up their minds to kill themselves until they get a new frock, and by that time the mid-Summer or the mid-Winter bargain sales are coming on, or it's just time for the Spring openings or the Fall openings, and so they live along.

Short-Haired Women

"IF you'll notice, you'll see that the disconsolate widows are those who were not left any insurance money, and the female suicides never have a cent in their pocketbooks."

"Oh," replied the Bookkeeper, "I like a woman all decked out in flowers and furbelows, but a man! Faugh! I hate the false alarm of both sexes. None of your short-haired women and long-haired men for mine, and when a man takes to petticoats he's due for the padded cell."

"Oh, I don't know," answered the Stenographer. "Some of the slickest gents that ever came down the pike wore baby blue satin skirts and passionate pink robes. Think of old Li Hung Chang, who always looked like a display of Summer silks, and the gentle Japs, and——"

"The Oriental mind is not swamped by splendor," objected the Bookkeeper, "but even a red vest locoes the plain American intellect, and that's what makes me say that that Ohio guy, who wants to go trailing skirts around in the mud, is the looniest ever."

"It would be sorter nice to be able to relapse into trousers on rainy days," mused the Bookkeeper. "I wonder if the police would allow women to come downtown in their husband's clothes in bad weather if they'd wear a placard on their breast saying, 'I Am a Woman'!"

(PASTOR PEOPLE'S TEMPLE)

BISHOP M'CABE does not speak for the Methodist Episcopal Church on the subject of labor unions. All of the Bishops of that church combined cannot so speak. The General Conference, meeting every four years, which is a representative body, composed of an equal number of laymen and preachers, is the only authoritative mouthpiece of the church. Even there the Bishops are not permitted to speak on the floor, and their public utterances are confined to an address which is of weight according to the subject matter and the personnel of the Board of Bishops.
